

WE ARE IN MOURNING

Why, you may ask, are we in mourning? After all, aren't things looking better? Johnson's not running again and we're going to have peace in Vietnam.

No, things are looking worse: we're stalling on negotiations and the bombing raids have increased; draft calls will be up by 100,000 next year.

Yes, there is plenty of reason to mourn; but we are not only sad about the national situation. Look around. How many of the senior men graduating this year, will die next year in Vietnam? We are in mourning for them.

Or for the rest of us. It might be us in Thailand, Cambodia, or Guatemala in a couple of years. Or it might be right here in the United States. The National Guard and the army are moving into more and more ghettos to suppress our black brothers and sisters.

We mourn for them: the blacks who are dying and the Guardsmen for what they are told to do.

What about you as a student? We mourn for those who are afraid to proclaim their freedom! for those who won't say "in loco parentis" must go! for those who are hypocrites, and believers in the double standard! for those who can't say in public what they'll say in private!

Let's face it. There is too much to mourn for, too much sadness for it to be a coincidence. Come on, America, wake up! Today, tomorrow; put your sadness, your concern, to work!
