

Taylor Curley interviewing Ella Burton clip 1
Topic: Center for Black Culture

[Ella Burton discussing her experience at the University of Delaware and navigating the environment.]

Ella Burton: ...the African American Center, I'm not sure what it's called now, uh, that's on South College Avenue, might be the Center for African American Culture or something like that now, but it was the Black Student Union then. And that was like a place of refuge for many of us, uh, to come together and take a moment to, uh, um, study together and to work together and to, ya know, do campus events, to help others know who we were and that we were there for, to be academically successful and contributors to society just like everyone else. So that, that was uh, so that helped us.