

Wilson Legg interviewing Janice Tildon-Burton clip 2

Topic: Delta Sigma Theta

[Dr. Janice Tildon-Burton responding to a question about how a more accepting climate at the University of Delaware might have changed her experience.]

Janice Tildon-Burton: That's a difficult one to answer because I was... I had a life outside of the campus, a family outside the campus, I was very involved when I was at Howard but then I wasn't married either so that's a whole different thing. So, it's really kind of like the things I really wanted to do I did at Howard that's where my class is. Those are people I know, those are people I'm still in touch with. Delaware was just a place to get a degree and so maybe if the sorority had been there when I was there that would have made a big difference, actually I'm sure that would have made a difference because I joined the sorority at Howard. There was no sorority on campus at U of D. The sorority came about when I was president of the Wilmington Delaware chapter and was one of the people that help get Delta Sigma Theta on University of Delaware campus
