

There's Only ONE WAY To Achieve Financial Transparency In Washington, D.C. Insist On It From Delaware Representatives Here's How ...

Did you know that a staggering amount of financial support is given to politicians who actually purport to be against the policies that the special interest groups who provide that money want in place?

Confusing, huh? Let me put it another way.

Corporations like AstraZeneca and Sally Mae are playing a major roll in how your state representatives prepare legislation and vote. When those companies are the ones that write such big checks to the campaigns of your elected officials, you can guess how those officials will focus their time and efforts.

What I suggest instead is that you elect HONEST individuals who would never sell their Senate Seat to special interest groups. These people do exist. I know because I'm one of them!

I'm Chuck Boyce, a business owner, father, proud son of a Veteran, and Delaware's Republican Candidate for U.S. Senate.

I'm writing today to ask for your financial support to help get my message out in time to win the Senate Seat in the November 2018 election.

My campaign has already had a great start. But right now is a critical time to have a strong financial showing as the end of Quarter Financial Reports are soon due. If they're strong, we'll gain even more support from Political Action Committees. And that's why I'm hoping you'll chose to financial support our campaign before the year's end.

Also, unlike my opponent, I will not get any hefty checks from special interest groups or corporations who are looking to buddy up with me in hopes that I'll push through favorable policy for them.

PAID FOR BY COMMITTEE TO ELECT CHUCK BOYCE

In fact, most of my campaign platform is focused on transparency, above all else. Transparency for the healthcare industry, for a host of Veterans issues, and government spending in general.

The good news is that the amount of wasted and poorly leveraged tax dollars is not just obscene to me (as it is to most Americans), it is FIXABLE.

It starts by electing officials who will present legislation that actually has a chance of passing. As I mentioned in a previous letter to you, it's quite typical for politicians to make themselves "look busy" by creating legislation that is confusing and has no hope of passing. This is done so they can say "well I did introduce legislation, but couldn't get the other side on board to affect change."

As someone who has had significant success in business in the private sector I can tell you firsthand, that activity like that is about spinning wheels and not about getting anything done. What we need in Washington are people who know how to get things done. Oftentimes that means getting opposing parties to come together and find common ground. This is a skill I possess in spades. It's what makes a smart and successful business person.

The other business skill I'll leverage to the fullest throughout my campaign and into my service if elected, is conservative spending. Which means I'll make calculated and shrewd moves with every campaign dollar we raise. Having honed my marketing skills and developed relationships with smart vendors, I'm in a position to campaign very effectively with your help.

Yes, Corporations do come out of the woodwork to offer "support" when you're running for office. But I won't accept their help because I'm not interested in getting elected for my own personal gain. I truly want to serve you and your family and all Delawareans in the U.S. Senate. And accepting special interest "help" would not be in service to you.

So, if you appreciate financial transparency and believe it is the way we can fix so much of what is broken, starting first with the political process (and then with our healthcare system, our Veterans, and even our education system), then I encourage you to donate now.
